

Lance Dornan

Intern

California Product Stewardship Council
(CPSC)

Lance Dornan is a dedicated advocate for sustainability and social equity. Lance's academic journey led him from Diablo Valley College to the University of California Davis, where he is earning his degree in Evolutionary Anthropology with a keen focus on health disparities and human genetic variation. Alongside his studies, Lance pursued his passion for combating consumerism driven by social media trend cycles. Lance expects to graduate with his bachelors in June of 2024.

During his time at UC Davis, he worked as the Outreach and Recruitment Coordinator for American Indian Recruitment and Retention. This position inspired his passion for coordinating public events and educating others. Lance worked as a Peer Advisor for the Career and Transfer Office at Diablo Valley College. During his time at Diablo Valley College, he managed Career Closet, a sustainable, donation driven service that gave work appropriate attire to students looking to enter the workforce. His previous experience in outreach and education sets him up for success with CPSC and their mission statement.

Lance joins CPSC as an Intern working on a variety of projects, including the ReFuel Your Fun & Save! reusable 1 lb. propane cylinder educational campaign, and policy advocacy for extended producer responsibility and product stewardship. Email Lance at Lance@calpsc.org and connect on LinkedIn.
