

Virginia McCormick

Senior Associate

California Product Stewardship Council (CPSC)

Virginia McCormick attended California State University Sacramento from June 2011 to August 2016 and pursued a Bachelor of Arts in Journalism with a Digital Media Communications minor.

At CSU Sacramento, Virginia worked as a student assistant to Emeritus Professor Sigrid Bathen, was a member of the Society for Professional Journalists, and held leadership roles serving as Co-Chair for Millennials in Media and Secretary for the Secular Student Alliance. While at CSU Sacramento, she completed internships through National Public Radio's NextGenRadio program via Capital Public Radio, and UC Center Sacramento's program via Capitol Weekly.

Virginia continued working with Capitol Weekly following her internship as a freelance writer until August 2016. From 2018 to 2022, Virginia worked as an Environmental Health & Safety Training & Consulting Admin at NES, Inc. in Folsom, California, which sparked her interest in both State and Federal environmental and employee protection procedures and regulation.

In 2022, Virginia joined CPSC as an Associate working on a variety of projects, including the ReFuel Your Fun & Save! reusable 1 lb. propane cylinder educational campaign, and policy advocacy for extended producer responsibility and product stewardship. In 2024, she was promoted to the role of Senior Associate and continues to work alongside her CPSC colleagues on a wide assortment of public education and advocacy goals.
