National Stewardship Action Council and California Product Stewardship Council Celebrate 2021 – 2022 Session Legislative Leaders at Awards Ceremony

SACRAMENTO — Last night, the National Stewardship Action Council (NSAC) and California Product Stewardship Council (CPSC) co-hosted a legislative awards ceremony to honor legislators who introduced and passed groundbreaking waste and toxics reduction and producer responsibility legislation in the 2021-2022 legislative session, sponsored by Atlantic Packaging and CPSC funders.

“The 2021 – 2022 legislative session has been the most productive yet for passing high-bar legislation to eliminate toxic and wasteful products, bring truth in recycling labeling, and ensure producers are responsible for the end-of-life impacts of their products” said Heidi Sanborn, Executive Director of NSAC, “We wanted to celebrate State Treasurer Fiona Ma who has been a champion for a Circular Economy for two decades and the legislative leaders and staff who worked so hard to make this very successful session a reality.”

“We thank our legislators that fearlessly took on two of the most problematic waste streams threatening our recycling infrastructure: batteries and single-use 1 lb. propane cylinders,” said Doug Kobold, Executive Director of CPSC. He goes on to say that “after years of trying to solve the battery recycling issue, we have effective solutions for loose batteries, embedded-battery products, and single-use 1 lb. propane cylinders that threaten our waste management infrastructure.”

The bills featured include SB 343 (Allen): Truth in Recycling Labeling from 2021 and SB 54 (Allen): Plastic Pollution Prevention and Packaging Producer Responsibility Act from 2022 , AB 818 (Bloom): Truth in Labeling for “Flushable” Wipes from 2021, AB 2208 (Kalra): Mercury Lamp Pollution Prevention Act, AB 1894 (L. Rivas & Petrie-Norris): Truth in Cannabis Vape Marketing, AB 707 (Quirk): Mercury Thermostat Collection Act of 2021 and AB 1793 (Quirk): Aquatic Toxicity Testing, AB 2440 (Irwin): The Responsible Battery Recycling Act, SB 1215 (Newman): The Electronic Waste Recycling Act, and SB 1256 (Wieckowski): Disposable 1 lb. Propane Cylinder Phaseout.

State Leader Awardees included: State Treasurer Fiona Ma, Senator Ben Allen, Senator Bob Hertzberg, Senator Josh Newman, Senator Nancy Skinner, Senator Henry Stern, Senator Bob Wieckowski, Senator Scott Wiener, Assemblymember Ash Kalra, Assemblymember Richard Bloom, Assemblymember Jacqui Irwin, Assemblymember Cottie Petrie-Norris, Assemblymember Dr. Bill Quirk, Assemblymember Luz Rivas.

Also honored was legislative and committee staff including Tina Andolina, Genevieve M. Wong, Elizabeth MacMillan, Marissa Plante, Dr. Marika Nell, Paige Brokaw, Dr. Manar Zaghulula, Claire Conlon, Matthew Montgomery, Judy Yee, Tricia Lipper, Josh Tooker, April Bird, Megan Mekelburg, and Margaret Lie.

“When I served on the San Francisco Board of Supervisors from 2002-2006, our San Francisco Department of the Environment wanted to increase our recycling percentage since the Altamont landfill was filling up and running out of space. This started me down my garbage and recycling journey. Since then, and later as an Assemblymember, I focused on waste reduction and improving recycling systems by bringing producers and all stakeholders to the table to negotiate and achieve Circular Economy legislation such as SB 54 (Allen). Receiving the Circular Economy Champion Award is wonderful, but seeing our state leading the nation is the greatest reward”, said Fiona Ma.

The Santa Barbara Museum of Art will present Activating the Spectator by Reshaping the Aesthetic Field: Op, Kinetic, and Participatory Art at Mid-Century at 3 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 31 at SBMA's Mary Craig Auditorium, 1130 State St., Santa Barbara.

Art historian Alexander Alberro explores the development of a research-based artistic practice that fused abstract art with mathematics, science, and technology in the late 1950s and early 1960s. The stated goal of the artists involved was to demystify the creative process in favor of an objective investigation of visual phenomena. Alberro addresses how and why these experiments evolved into a greater concern with the participation of art spectators.

Antonio Rey, one of today's most important and popular multi-award winning Spanish flamenco guitarists and composers – a true master of the instrument – will be making his Santa Barbara debut, promising an incredibly exciting and moving performance on Sunday, September 11 at the New Vic Theatre in Santa Barbara at 7:00 p.m.

Rey's 2020 "Flamenco sin Fronteras" album was awarded the Latin Grammy for Best Flamenco Album.

He has composed for and played alongside artists such as Antonio Canales, the Japanese dancer Yoko Komatsubara, Rafael Amargo, Richard Bona, and Farruquito. He has also worked and toured with the Maestro Paco de Lucía.

Rey Rey is a winner of several national and international flamenco guitar competitions and after such an impressive career accompanying some of the most important figures in flamenco – both singers and dancers – it's time for Antonio's guitar to take center stage. Performing with Rey in Santa Barbara is guitarist Jose Tanaka, Diego Alvarez on percussion, along with dancer Maria Bermudez.

Santa Barbara Museum of Art to present Pulitzer Prize-winning Forrest Gander joining poet Patricio Ferrari at SBMA's Parallel Stories at 2:30 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 11 at SBMA's Mary Craig Auditorium, 1130 State St., Santa Barbara.

Too often we hear that something is lost in translation, but who talks about what can be gained in the process, especially in relation to poetry? In an age of dwindling linguistic diversity and cultural homogenization, poetry translators build bridges across borders and between cultures, writers, and readers, introducing new syntactical strategies, rhythms, and image repertoires. Reading as translators is the deepest reading, a multi-layered engagement

experience—verbal and visual choices interwoven with the vibrancy of sound—at its core.

the story of a group

researchers, naturalists, adventurers, cooks, immigrants, and scientifically curious teenagers who came together in the late 1930s to embark upon a series of ambitious expeditions never before, or since, attempted. Their mission: to piece together the broken shards of the Channel Islands' history and evolution. California's eight Channel Islands, sometimes called "North America's Galapagos," each support unique ecosystems with varied flora and fauna and differing human histories. This untold saga of adventure, discovery, and goals abandoned is juxtaposed against the fresh successes of a new generation of Channel Island scholars.

The Santa Barbara Museum of Art to present “Going Global: Abstract Art at Mid-Century” through Sept. 25.

Like the US dollar, air travel, and space satellites, abstract art encircled the globe or at least the capitalist West during the middle of the 20th century.

This exhibition shows just how far abstraction reached and some of the forms it took during the Cold War, when glossy color magazines and proliferating fairs brought a globalized art world into being. Going Global has artists born in Argentina, Colombia, Germany, France, Israel, Japan, Mexico, Peru, Spain, the United Kingdom, and the United States. Nearly all the works come from the Museum’s permanent collection.

Artists in the exhibition include Yaacov Agam, Carlos Cruz-Diez, Eduardo MacEntyre, Ernst Nay, Kenzo Okada, Jesús Rafael Soto, Pierre Soulages, Fernando de Szyszlo Valdelomar, Bridget Riley, Maria Helena Vieira da Silva, and Kansuke Yamamoto.
